Building Alberta through residential construction and development

EDMONTON – BILD Alberta welcomes Premier-elect Jason Kenney and his team while thanking Rachel Notley and the previous government for their service.

“Premier-elect Kenney, heard our concerns and he recognized our industry’s struggles,” says BILD Alberta CEO, Carmen Wyton, “the UCP pledged to address several issues in its policy platform, and we are eager to work with the new government to make those promises a reality.”

The UCP platform raises issues impacting housing including cutting red tape, finding an Alberta solution to mortgage rules and dealing with concerns around the Municipal Government Act.

“BILD Alberta’s 1,800 member companies in the land development, home building and professional renovations industry, want to grow the economy, get people working and encourage more investment,” says BILD Alberta Chair, Steve Bontje. “We look forward to partnering with Premier-elect Kenney and the new government to address housing - for all Albertans.”

While forward-looking, BILD Alberta is also grateful to Rachel Notley and the NDP government, which worked hard for our province during difficult times.

“BILD Alberta was a valued resource on many files, working closely with several NDP members who will be returning to the Legislature,” says Wyton, “We look forward to continuing the conversation with all government members in the future.”
